PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

Indianapolis has not seen so early nor so gay a social season for years, and if the entertainmente keep on at this rate we will rival Washington and New York as a social center. The Woman is enfortunate indeed who cannot go out to luncheon, a reception, a dinner, a dance or a wedding nearly every day in the week. The social event of last week was the marriage of Fanny Vajen to Mr. Charles S. Voorhees. The Second Presbyterian Church has not been the scene of such a brilliant gathering for years, if ever. The numerous guests from out of town attracted the greatest attention, next to the bride, and none more than the distinguished father of the groom, Hop. Daniel W. Voorhees, who escorted Mrs. Vajen, the bride's mother. The beautiful church, profusion of plants, the richly attired company and the bridal party made a scene which, once witnessed, is not soon forgotten. The chrysanthemum show has been a rendezvous f r every one, and crowds have seen the magnificent display of flowers. The Flower Mission fair opens on Tuesday evening at Tomlinson Hall, and as so many who entertain are interested in it, there will be a slight censuion in the line of receptions, although several invitations are out for teas and card parties.

Young ladies were very willing to make bets on the election, and visions of gloves, of every length and color, furs, bonbonieres, even sealskin sacques, muffs and capes, danced through their brains, for they only thought of gains, and losses were supposed to be an impossible thing. But they did not all gain. Some who were so very sure are gradually making up their minds to make the best of it, and are paying their debts. In many instances it takes not only all of this month's spending money, but that of next, and a goodly share of the Christ-mas allowance. One will be obliged to go without a new party-frees, and last season's gowns will have to do for some time yet, though it is no sign that a girl who wears a party-dress this year that she appeared in last year is the girl who lost the bet. One young lady is reveling in two dozen pairs of new gloves, three pairs of shoes several pounds of fine candy and any quantity of trinkets. Another trembles to think of the state of her finances if she had lost on the

An innovation in receptions and teas has been made by the ladies in Louisville. At a chocolate -which is somewhat different from a tea, in that the hours are from 12 to 3 o'clock, served-the hostess was assisted by six young ladies and twelve young gentlemen. The latter made themselves generally agreeable, escorted the ladies to the refreshment room, saw that they were properly cared for by the waiters, and left them to return to the parlors and per-form the same pleasant duty for some other lady or ladies. Those who attended the com-pany were delighted, and the young men expressed themselves as having had a most charming time. Indiananclis young men are so proverbially timid and retiring that it is doubtful if they could be persuaded to go to a reception where there were so many ladies, but it might be tried, and if they once did so assist it would become so popular that they would soon be paying premiums for the privilege.

There is a well-known young lady living on one of our fashionable streets whose family are teasing her considerably over an incident which happened one day last week. The young lady had made a bet on the election, and if won she would receive two pounds of candy. A package was left at the house, and, no one of the family being home, it was placed on the hat-rack, in the hall. As it was round, they thought it was the laundry. It was taken to the father's room, and left there. He knew it was not his, and put it in his daughter's room; she put back. Finally, at the close of the second day that it had been in the house, some one mentioned the package, and, as no one claimed it, it was brought down stairs and was opened. There, in a beautiful round box, was the two pounds of candy. You may say laundry or candy to that young lady, and she will not show the best disposition in the world, owing to the frequent use of the two words which the family are bound she shall not forget.

Very early in the fall, when social matters were being talked over, and when the prospect for a gay season was not so assured as now, quite a number of young ladies and gentlemen said that if General Harrison was elected they would give large parties. Those who belong to the charmed circle of which they are members are now standing on the proverbial tip-toe of expectancy, and can hardly await developments.

General Harrison a Good Walker.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Walking is General Harrison's favorite exercise. He does not move briskly, neither does he saunter, but he has a three-and a-half-miles-anhour gate which is peculiarly his own. He puts his feet squarely down in such a way as to wear the bottoms of his boots evenly. He never shuffles. It is a clean medium step, each one precisely like its predecessor. He wears a black overcoat which reaches to the knees, and his hands are almost constantly buried in the capacious side pockets. A pair of gloves lasts him a long time. A soft black hat is the General's favorite headwear, although some of his pictures show him with a silk tile in his hand. This black hat is not worn in military fashion, with a long crease from front to rear through the top. but the crown is pushed up into place, and but for the small dents would present a flat top. The rim of the hat is not a wide one, and it cur's up all the way round. There is nothing "dressy" about the coming President. President Arthur had more new trousers in a quarter than General Harrisan will have in four years.

Hydrophobia Among Geese.

The night of Oct. 15 C. J. Myers, proprietor of Myers's grove, thirteen miles from here, was awakened by a cackling of reese. He found that a dog had got into his flock of geese and was biting them. Driving the animal away he gave no more thought to the occurrence. A few days ago some of his geese began to act strangely. They viciously attacked every per son that went near them and nibbled each other in a peculiarly venomous way that made Mr. Myers feel anxious. After a few hours the gress would drop dead. Mr. Myers sent for Dr. Myers, a veterinary surgeon, who declared that the fowls undoubtedly had the bydrophobia. This is, so far as known, the first case on record of geese getting the rabies.

A Booming Southern Newspaper.

Memphis Avalanche. The Avalanche apologizes to its readers and thanks its patrons this morning. It was discovered at a late hour last night, too late for rectification, that the latter had monopolized forty-four of the fifty-six columns of to-day's isene. It is one of those accidents which will occur to the best regulated newspaper, but we trust the readers of the Avalanche will be sufficiently gratified by this evidence of prosperity of their favorite newspaper to bear with us on this occasion. Besides, to-day's issue is evidence in rebuttal of the claims which the croskers are making that Harrison's election has it is said. Besides this, it is alleged that it can knocked Southern business sitly.

Curious Stories of Battles Between Wasps and Their Enemies.

"A story which appeared a few days age con-cerning a fight between a wasp and a spider, re-minded me of a similar battle which I witnessed minded me of a similar battle which I witnessed a short time ago. I was walking across a field when I saw a spider's web on the grass and noticed that a wasp had just been caught in its meshes. The spider was on the watch, and showed unmistakable signs of delight as its victim buzzed and struggled in the vain endeavor to set itself free. The ugly creature sat at the bottom of the web, holding the ropes that were to bind its prey. When the wasp ceased to struggle the spider approached. But the winged insect had not given up. As it saw its captor it showed fight and exerted itself to the utmost to get near enough to use its sting. The spider retreated a little, but apparently only for the purpose of tightning the strings that held the prisoner.

"A moment later the wasp was turned over and bound more firmly than ever. It seemed as if the spider took advantage of each movement of its adversary to wind another rope about its less and tie them yet more firmly. The skill displayed was a revelation to me—I had no idea insects knew so much. Finally, when the wasp was so bound that it could neither kick nor sting, the spider iumed upon it, killed it almost instantly by biting, and then proceeded to feast

"At another time I witnessed a flerce strucele between a large horner and a colony of waspe which had built a pest in the window of an old shop. The nornet crawled up the glass toward the nest, and when the wasps saw him they formed in battle array to defend their home. The intruder moved onward, when a wesp darted from the ranks to sting him. But the courageous little fellow hardly seemed to touch his enemy before falling dead upon the window sill. At this the waspe setreated in a body to the other side of the nest to lay plans for battle. As the hornet came closer all suddenly reshed toward him in a body. A large wasp stepped out of the ranks, flew over the horset and alighted beyond him. The invader halted, and the little army also stood still, watching him. The unequal forces eyed each other for some time, when suddenly it appeared as if the large forward, making quick work of the enemy. Several waspe fell dead before the bornet was conquered, and the survivors did not venture to approach their prostrated foe until he had been dead for several minutes." The above tales were told to a reporter by au intelligent Pitteburg mechanic for whom the study of insect life seems to have a peculiar

New Use for the Camera. A neat device has been invented by a Philadelphia business man whose office is overrun by unwelcome visitors. He has purchased a ce-tective photographic camera, and has it placed directly opposite the door of his office. When the visitor enters, the office boy, a bright lad and well schooled in the diplomacy of his profession, turns the knob and takes an instantan photograph of the intruder. This is dovelope and forms one of a collection of undesirable visitors which is kept in a book for the boy's instruction in the future. People who come to waste others' time. collectors with bills that they wish paid, and the thousand and one disagreeable characters known to the average business man form the basis of this unique collec-tion. In practice it works like a charm. For example, the owner of the office says: "John, anyone called this morning!" And the faithful boy remarks: "Yes, sir: No. 14 dropped in. I told him the usual story about your being out of town, and he went." A glance at the album shows No. 14 to be the collector for a jewelry store, and opposite his name is the significant legend: "Tell him I've gone to the country."

A Gun That Connot Buret. Experiments are being made in England with a new "safety" gan, made upon what is kno as the Fletcher patent, and which is said to be capable of discharging sixty shells a minute, suently and invisibly. The gun is discharged by steam or vapor at a pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch. The gun weighs about one ten, and will carry several miles a hun pound shell charged with the highest explonot burst, has no recell, costs but $50,000, and can be made in three or four week.
